Super Performances For A Super Cause

by Clare Abbatiello

Last Thursday, a band concert was held in the HHS auditorium to support CHaD, a charity with which most of us are familiar. The Children's Hospital at Dartmouth cares for hundreds of ill children on a multitude of levels. Performed by the ever-talented Hanover High band collective, this concert was called Superbands. And super, it was. All the numbers performed were superhero themed, in conjunction with the iconic theme of CHaD Hero. All proceeds from the concert raffle were matched by CHaD Hero, in conjunction with Positive Tracks, a nonprofit organization dedicated to using athletic activity in order to fundraise.

The concert was opened by jazzy trio, The Dudes (Kai Renshaw, Bauti Gallino, and Aidan Marshall), who performed a piece while the audience filtered in. All three bands, Symphonic, Jazz, and Wind alike, entertained and empowered the audience

From Student to Teacher: An Interview With William Johnson

by Maxwell Saucier

*EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr Johnson replaces Mrs. Gordon as Hanover High's newest art teacher.

Where were you before coming to HHS?

Last year I was working at the Richmond Middle School as a special ed assistant. I have been within SAU 70 over the last three years. The two years previous to RMS I had also worked as a special education assistant at the Marion Cross school. In addition to working as a special ed assistant I have also been working at HHS as a sports coach. I have coached five years of basketball, soccer, and tennis. In addition to that, I had a summer job at Cape Cod sea camps as an assistant art director.

I have heard that you were once a student at HHS. Is this true?

This is true. I was in the class of 05, and I still see some of the faces around now that were here when I was. And no, I did not have Bill Murphy. I get that a lot. A lot of the teachers that I had and liked are still here, like Ms. Greene for art, Mr. Bourne for English, Ms. Postans, Ms. King, and Mr.

Donnelly.

What classes are you teaching this year?

I am currently teaching two sections of design class and a section of sculpture. In the spring I am teaching two sections of design again as well as a pottery course.

What kind of art do you most enjoy creating?

I really like making things with my hands. I am really enjoying teaching the sculpture class, making plaster molds and press tiles, and I also enjoy working with clay. When I went to Alfred University for college I was really into ceramics, hand building, wheel throwing, and ceramic systems (using molds for ceramics). For me, anything that I use my hands with is a lot of fun. I was actually just working on this wax piece for my sculpture class, a jumping Spider Man (pictured below). The last project I made for myself at home was turning an old guitar body into a lamp by putting a fixture inside and lining the inside with a bunch of metal plumbers tape to make it more reflective. I like anything that allows me to

Homecoming Victorious (Mostly)

by Sadhya Garg

Another year, another Hanover High School homecoming come and gone. This year's event saw five varsity teams compete against competition ranging from rivals, Lebanon, to Trinity High School.

The festivities kicked off on Friday with girls varsity soccer all but decimating Trinity High School in a resounding 7-0 victory. The win was their tenth of the season so far.

Later that night, boys varsity soccer faced off against Manchester Memorial High School in a thrilling match attended by students and staff alike. The boys came back from one goal behind to win in overtime. The end result was a 2-1 win for the Marauders, whose record now stands at 11-2.

Varsity volleyball recorded only their third win thus far against ConVal Regional High School, beating the latter 3-1. Things weren't as lucky for varsity field hockey, who were administered a 1-3 defeat by Lebanon on Saturday.

To finish off what can easily be called a successful homecoming, HHS football played Sanborn High School under the lights. The result was 33-7 in favor of the Marauders, subsequently handing them their sixth win of the season. The victory leaves Hanover still with their 100% record intact, a feat that has certainly left people pleased (albeit baffled).

Council Report: 12 October 2016

by Justin Zhou

The Council primarily discussed the March Intensive Service Integration Motion this previous meeting. The motion recommends all March Intensive courses to integrate a service component into their objectives by the year 2018. Previously, members have stressed that the spirit of the motion isn't necessarily to change all March Intensive courses, but to make students aware of how community service can be integrated into activities. Concerns were voiced over how a community service component could be integrated into certain March Intensive courses, such as those that travel. Concerns were also voiced on how since Hanover High School is not requiring community service in order to graduate, there has been a gradual decline in Youth in Action involvement and that many students do not have the experience of community service. Members brought up that perhaps the reason for the lack of involvement in community service could have been because of inadequate amount of time or having the general idea that community service is insignificant. Members stated that this motion would give many students a chance to experience community service. A Service Ad Hoc Committee has been created to address community service at the high school with an initial focus on March Intensive. However, the March Intensive Service Integration Motion has failed with a vote of 33-2 against this motion and an abstention.

with numerous uplifting songs, such as both the Avengers and the Incredibles theme. In an interesting twist, the audience was able to hear a recording of bands' first rehearsals before each song, in order to show how much progress the hardworking musicians had made. After an inspiring performance and a thunderous applause, the audience exited the auditorium with a feeling of satisfaction. Not only were they able to hear great music, but they contributed to a heroic cause while doing it.

What aspect of HHS have you enjoyed most so far?

It's been great getting to work with kids in something that they really enjoy doing. Being a special ed assistant the last few years I've had to work with kids who struggle with and dislike parts of school. I've gone through that myself; I had an IEP in school and struggled at times, but I think that finding the arts program when I was here really helped me get through it. I want to make sure that students can have that same experience, learning what works for them and makes them want to come to school.

What are your goals for this year? What would you like to accomplish?

The goal for me this year is to create a seamless transition into the High School. I want students and other faculty to feel like I'm already a part of this community. I've kind of already been able to do that because of all the kids I've worked with in the sports programs and I already get recognised by a lot of kids just walking through the hall.

Presidential candidates Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump in the second of three debates last Sunday

Current Events: Week of 10 October

by Hayden Smith

Hurricane Matthew Rips Through Haiti:

Hurricane Matthew devastated large areas of the Caribbean nation of Haiti last week, leaving at least 900 people dead and destroying or flooding many homes and roads. Although the storm has fully passed the country, Haiti now faces a long road to recovery. Several coastal communities are still cut off from the rest of the country and therefore have limited access to any outside aid. Meanwhile, many hospitals are too ill-equipped to deal with the large number of patients coming in with injuries sustained during the hurricane. There are also fears that the damage done to sanitation infrastructure will result in an accelerated cholera outbreak across the country. Cargo planes have begun to arrive from the United States carrying relief supplies such as food, shelter materials, and water purification kits.

Hurricane Matthew caused quite a scare in the southeastern United States over the weekend as the then-category four storm began to advance into Florida with 130 mph winds. Massive evacuation orders were given in coastal areas. Although it has since slowed down dramatically and is no longer classified as a hurricane, the storm continues to cause severe flooding in low-lying areas in North Carolina. At least 38 deaths have been caused by the storm so far in Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, and Virginia.

Clinton and Trump Spar In Second Debate:

United States presidential candidates Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump faced off once again on the debate stage at Washington University in St. Louis, MO, on Sunday. The candidates spent time taking questions in a town hall-style debate on issues like tax, energy, environmental, and foreign policies (among other things). However, the candidates spent much of the debate trading blows and insults over each other's past judgement. Trump went after Clinton on the sexual harassment allegations that face her husband Bill and Clinton's ties to wealthy donors on Wall Street (an issue that gained attention after bits of the transcripts from Clinton's Wall Street speeches were leaked on the website WikiLeaks) while Clinton attacked Trump on the comments that he made in a recently revealed 2005 video in which Trump spoke about being able to use his celebrity status to grope and sexually touch women; this same video caused Trump to lose the support of many prominent members of the Republican CONT. Entrepreneur Club Coming to Hanover High

by Hayden Smith

Matt Westelman, '18, is in the process of launching a new club at the school known as the Entrepreneur Club that aims at teaching interested students about running businesses. When asked why he was starting the club, Matt cited his concern over the lack of courses in which students could learn about business as a reason for his desire to start the club. In an interview, Matt also said, "We should be learning how to run our own businesses due to the amount of small businesses in Hanover."

Once the club is officially launched, Matt plans on doing a variety of activities to help students learn about the business world. He currently plans on using a special software program known as GoVenture CEO to allow students to simulate business planning and operations. One feature on this program will allow users' businesses to compete against each other. Matt also plans on organizing discussions with local experts and visiting successful businesses in the Upper Valley in order to gain further insight on the local economy. Mr. Jamie Coughlin, the director of the Dartmouth Entrepreneurial Network (DEN), has agreed to serve as an adult mentor for the club and will allow to club to use his facilities on various occasions.

Matt is excited about the club and encourages any interested students to contact him and come to the club's meetings, which will take place both during and outside of school. He also suggested that those interested in the club come to the meetings of the team that is currently developing a new school store called the Marauder Hut, which the club is currently collaborating with

Wells Fargo CEO Steps Down In Aftermath of Scandal:

Wells Fargo CEO and Chairman John Stumpf has resigned from his job at the United States' third largest bank following a major investigation of the bank's illegal sales practices. The scandal began last month when regulators revealed that many Wells Fargo employees had illegally created over two million bank accounts in customers' names without asking for the customers' permission; they did this in order to make it appear as if there had been a boost in sales. As a result of this practice, many Wells

Fargo customers were charged for services and products that they did not use or ask for. In response to these findings, Wells Fargo was fined 185 million dollars by the U.S. Consumer Financial Protection Bureau; in addition, the bank directed 5 million dollars to customer compensation. The scandal also led to the firing of over 5,000 Wells Fargo employees and a lengthy investigation (which included a Congressional hearing) of the company. Timothy Sloan will replace Stumpf as CEO and will likely face major challenges in attempting to rebuild the bank's reputation.
